FULL FORECAST ON PAGE 29

WEATHER OR NOT: Buck Lee, general manager of the Santa Rosa Island Authority, braces against the wind in Pensacola Beach, Fla., on Sunday as the region prepared for the arrival of Hurricane Dennis. The storm hit the Gulf Coast 10 months after Hurricane Ivan, which killed 29 people in the Florida Panhandle alone.

Dennis Follows Ivan's Lead

Hurricane-weary Gulf Coast withstands yet another storm

PENSACOLA, FLA. | Hurricane Dennis roared onto the Florida Panhandle and Alabama coast Sunday with a 120-mph fury of blinding squalls, crashing waves and flying debris that followed in the ruinous footprints of Ivan just 10 months ago.

The storm crossed land about 3:25 p.m. EDT near the same state-line spot where Ivan arrived, pounding beachfronts already painfully exposed by denuded dunes, flattened neighborhoods and piles of rubble that turned into deadly missiles.

The storm quickly weakened after passing over land but still packed devastating winds. Power outages began almost immediately, with 140,000 homes and businesses without electricity in Florida, most in the Panhandle, and 80,000 affected in coastal Alabama.

Florida's Gulf Power Co. expected more outage, and said its more than 400,000 customers should be prepared to be without electricity for three weeks or more.

Within minutes of the storm's landfall between the western Panhandle towns of Navarre Beach and Pensacola Beach, Gov. Jeb Bush asked his brother, President Bush, to declare Florida a major disaster area from the fifth hurricane to hit the state in less than a year.

For some on the Gulf Coast who have been through the cycles of recovery and rebuilding already with Ivan, Dennis seemed more than just a climatological coincidence.

"The good Lord's trying to tell us something or other," said 77-year-old Lesley Hale, among 1,200 residents who rode out the storm at a shelter in Pensacola. "Something's going to give." ALLEN G. BREED (AP)

WOOF | The Alpha in Him Charges were dropped Thursday in the case of a Murphysboro, Ill., man arrested for barking at a K9 unit dog in May, United Press International reported. The dog had barked at Adrian Davis from its squad car, and Davis responded by clapping, shouting and barking back. Michael Hopkins, the police officer teamed with the dog, heard the dog's barking from inside a nearby courtroom and came out to investigate. Davis has since apologized. (EXPRESS) EyeOpeners | Page 2

RIGHTS

The Land of the Free and the Drunk

A Portland, Maine, man's lawsuit argues he has a constitutional right to get drunk on private property as long as he doesn't cause a public disturbance. Eric Laverriere said he drank several beers, but wasn't drunk, when officers arrived at his friend's duplex to break up a New Year's party. Laverriere told police he was spending the night at his friend's and wasn't going to be driving; police then took him into protective custody and locked him in a cell for nine hours until he was sober. "One thing people should be able to do is drink in their own house," Laverriere said. (AP)

TRAINING

Practice Better Make Perfect, Right Now

What was supposed to have been a practice drill turned into a real life rescue for Cedar Rapids, Iowa, firefighters Friday. As firefighters set fire to a dilapidated house as part of a drill to fight a controlled burn, a man appeared at one of the windows. "We changed gears, from watching a house burn to performing a rescue," said spokesman Dave Koch. "Fortunately for him and us, he wasn't hurt." The fire was quickly extinguished; the smoke had apparently awakened the man, who had been hiding and fell asleep, Koch said. Firefighters had used the house before for drills. (AP)

MATRIMONY

Fodder of the Bride

Here comes the bride, all dressed in hide. A pair of rare dwarf Brahman cattle, Thong Khaow, left, and the bull, Thong Kham, were married Sunday in a traditional Thai ceremony featuring processions and a banquet for more than 2,000 human guests, at a cattle market in Sa Kaew. Thong Kham's owner — who set up the wedding only after he could not buy the mate — offered a dowry of fresh grass, hay, maize and $2,400. (EXPRESS)

EXPLOSIVES

She Never Did Like Movers

Selma, Ala., workers removing furniture from the home of a deceased woman got a shock Thursday when they spotted an active hand grenade in the bottom of a couch. The FBI, ATF and a police bomb squad used a robot to rip open the back of the couch. A member of the bomb squad then went into the house and found the pin was in the grenade. The grenade was secured and taken to a bunker, where officials planned to dispose of it, police said. (AP)

Transit to Stay at 'Orange'

Terror alert will remain high for now as probe proceeds in London

WASHINGTON | The U.S. will keep its terror alert on high for mass transit as British officials try to determine the culprits and methods used in the London bus and rail bombings, Homeland Security Secretary Michael Chertoff said Sunday.

Chertoff said the code orange alert for mass transit would remain at least through Monday while the U.S. government monitors the British investigation for information about who was responsible and "what kinds of tactics we have to worry about."

After four bombs exploded Thursday throughout the London subway and bus system, the U.S. raised its terror alert amid concern about a possible copycat attack.

Code orange indicates a high risk of attack, and in the U.S. system is the second-highest terror alert behind red. The lowest level is green.

"I'd love to say we're going to see green in our lifetime," Chertoff told NBC's "Meet the Press." "... but I can't tell you in the foreseeable future we're going to be below yellow."

Chertoff said authorities can try to prevent a mass transit attack with intelligence and bomb detectors and plan to respond effectively if something happens. But he added that they can't eliminate the danger. "There is no perfect security in life," Chertoff said on ABC's "This Week." NEDRA PICKLER (AP)

Countdown Begins for Space Shuttle Launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, FLA. | The countdown for NASA's return to space began Sunday amid sky-high anticipation, although Hurricane Dennis threatened to interfere with the lift-off of the first shuttle mission in more than two years.

At precisely 6 p.m., the multitude of countdown clocks started ticking down to a Wednesday launch of Discovery. The last time they flashed the hours, minutes and seconds remaining before a blast-off was in 2003, for Columbia's disastrous flight.

Thunderstorms were forecast throughout the week. However, a ridge of high pressure offered hope

Student Beaten to Death With Bike Lock

CHICAGO | A student at the University of Illinois at Chicago was beaten to death with his bicycle lock during a fight near campus, and two men were arrested, police said Sunday.

Tombol Malik, 23, of Chicago, was pronounced dead shortly after the beating early Saturday.

Police believe the two suspects struck Malik repeatedly in the face and head with the bicycle lock. Investigators also found a stun gun on the ground nearby. Officials would not comment on a motive.

Charges of first-degree murder and aggravated battery were filed against Muaz Haffar, 21, of Burr Ridge, and Mantas Matulis, 20, of Clarendon Hills.

The death came weeks after a UIC history professor was beaten to death in suburban Oak Park. Peter D'Agostino was found unconscious outside a home on June 22 and died later. Police said Saturday there had been no arrests in that case. (AP)

FBI IDs Remains as Missing Idaho Boy

Discovery leaves sister as only survivor of brutal attack on family

COEUR D'ALENE, IDAHO | Human remains discovered at a remote western Montana campsite were identified Sunday as Dylan Groene, the 9-year-old boy who disappeared nearly two months ago from the scene of three grisly slayings.

The announcement from Kootenai County officials confirmed that Dylan's sister Shasta, 8, was the only survivor of the brutal attacks that began the night authorities believe Joseph Edward Duncan III appeared at her mother's rural Coeur d'Alene home.

When police found the bound and beaten bodies of the children's mother, 13-year-old brother and mother's boyfriend on May 16, Shasta and Dylan were gone.

There was no sign of the children until six weeks later, when a waitress spotted Shasta in a local diner with an older man and called police. The man was Duncan, a registered sex offender from North Dakota. He was arrested, and interviews with Shasta led investigators to the remote campsite where the human remains were found.

Duncan, 42, is charged with two counts of first-degree kidnapping, and authorities have said he could face more charges.

Missile Tests Won't Resume 'Til Fall

WASHINGTON | Flight tests of the nation's missile defense system will not resume until this fall at the earliest as the military revamps the program following two failures in the past seven months, a military official says.

The military may conduct two tests by year's end, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity because no schedule has been announced. The delay further protracts Pentagon efforts to validate a multibillion-dollar program that supporters say will help protect the nation from intercontinental ballistic missiles. Critics say that claim remains unproven. (AP)

Britons Mourn as Police Seek Tips

No charges for 3 men arrested at Heathrow

LONDON | Britons gathered in churches Sunday and piled bouquets of flowers at an Underground station to mourn victims of last week's bomb attacks on London's transport system as police sorted through hundreds of tips from the public.

Three men arrested at Heathrow airport on Sunday under anti-terrorist laws were released later in the day without charge, police said.

Police had cautioned against linking the detentions of the men — all Britons — to the Thursday explosions on three subway trains and a double-decker bus in which at least 49 people were killed and 700 wounded. Sixty victims remained in hospitals Sunday.

Deep underground, police continued the hot, filthy work of searching for bodies from the worst of the subway bombings. Twenty-one bodies have been recovered so far in the tunnel between Russell Square and King's Cross stations, said Andy Trotter, assistant chief constable of British Transport Police. Those victims are part of the total death count of 49.

A London woman holds a flyer for a friend missing since the bomb attacks.

Reports in London newspapers Sunday identified a possible suspect as Mustafa Setmariam Nasar — a Syrian suspected of being al Qaeda's operations chief in Europe and the alleged mastermind of last year's bombings in Madrid. London police refused to comment, but a U.S. official said that both nations were trying to locate Nasar.

As police studied 1,700 tips that have flooded in from the public so far, they also appealed for more help from anyone with video or images from camera-equipped cell phones taken in the vicinity of the four blasts. ROBERT BARR (AP)

Jerusalem Barrier Plan To Proceed

JERUSALEM | Israel's Cabinet on Sunday affirmed a plan to surround Jerusalem with a barrier, despite protests by Palestinians, who say the Israelis are unilaterally redrawing the disputed city's boundaries and shifting its demographic balance in favor of Jews.

The Israeli ministers acknowledged about 55,000 Palestinian residents in four neighborhoods will eventually be cut off from their city by the separation barrier, meant to stop Palestinian bombers, and promised to come up with a plan by Sept. 1 on how to alleviate some of the hardships.

Palestinian officials rejected the Israeli Cabinet decision.

"Israel is not serving the peace process nor its security well with such acts, but rather places more obstacles in the path to peace," Palestinian leader Mahmoud Abbas said.

About half of the 40-mile Jerusalem barrier has already been built. MARK LAVIE (AP)

HOUSE CALL: A woman in Kyrgyzstan casts her ballot in the presidential election from her home near Bishkek on Sunday. Kurmanbek Bakiyev, who took over as interim leader when the country's president fled an uprising three months ago, appeared headed for a landslide victory at the polls.

Londoners Face Fear of Possible Repeat Attack

LONDON | It's a nightmare scenario that police and the public don't want to think about but can't afford to ignore: What if the terrorists behind last week's deadly bombings strike again?

Authorities have warned that the terror cell that carried out Thursday's bombings of three trains and a bus may be intact and capable of more strikes.

The threat raises troubling questions about whether Britain has a plan to protect its sprawling capital from concerted attack — and whether any such plan could work.

"Our fear is of course of more attacks," Home Secretary Charles Clarke, the Cabinet minister responsible for law and order, said Sunday.

It didn't happen after al Qaeda's Sept. 11, 2001, attacks in New York and Washington, or after the March 2004 train bombings in Madrid, Spain.

But authorities, warning that anything is possible, said they're working to contain the threat by boosting police patrols, deploying more undercover officers and keeping watch on known suspects.

Conservative leader Michael Howard called anew Sunday for extra security measures, including the naming of a minister of homeland security — a step Washington took after Sept. 11. (AP)

SERBIA-MONTENEGRO Tadic: Serbia Must Distance Itself From War Criminals

Serbia must distance itself from criminals who committed atrocities during the Balkan wars, the president said Sunday on the eve of the 10th anniversary of the worst massacre in Europe since World War II. Boris Tadic — the first Serbian leader to attend a commemoration ceremony in the eastern Bosnian town of Srebrenica — said in a statement that Serbia's future depends on its attitude toward war crimes committed in its name. Bosnia Serb troops killed 8,000 Muslim men and boys after they overran the U.N. safe area in July 1995. (AP)

PHILIPPINES Catholic Leaders Stop Short Of Asking for Arroyo to Quit

The Philippines' influential Roman Catholic bishops expressed regret Sunday that a political crisis has polarized the country, but stopped just short of calling for President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo to resign, saying she must search her heart for the best solution. "We do not demand her resignation," the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines said in a statement. "Yet, neither do we encourage her to simply dismiss such a call from others." (AP)

Dozens Die in Wave of Iraq Attacks

Deadliest suicide blast hits crowd of military recruits, killing 25

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | A man strapped with explosives blew himself up Sunday at a military recruiting center, one of series of suicide attacks that killed at least 48 people.

Sunday's deadliest attack hit the army recruiting center at Muthana airfield in Baghdad when a man dressed in civilian clothes detonated two explosive-laden belts among a crowd of recruits, killing 25 others and wounding nearly 50, U.S. and hospital officials said.

Among the other attacks, two suicide car bombers killed at least seven Iraqi customs officials at the Walid border crossing into Syria, the U.S. military said.

A suicide car bomber also rammed into a police convoy carrying an Iraqi brigadier general near Mosul, killing five policemen and wounding three, the U.S. military and police said.

Five American soldiers were injured by a roadside bomb in Baghdad, U.S. officials said.

Separately, Prime Minister Ibrahim al-Jaafari criticized U.S. and other forces for shooting at Iraqi civilians who act suspiciously, saying such cases should be handled in a "civilized" way, such as shooting at tires instead of passengers.

Military Releases L.A. Filmmaker Detained in Iraq

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | An Iranian-American aspiring filmmaker who has been detained by the U.S. military for nearly two months without being charged was released Sunday, officials said.

Cyrus Kar, 44, of Los Angeles, was taken into custody May 17 near Balad when potential bomb parts were found in a taxi in which he was riding. His family had filed a lawsuit accusing the federal government of violating his civil rights when it continued to hold him after the FBI cleared him of suspicion.

Kar's Iranian cameraman also was released Sunday, but the taxi driver remains in custody.

"Kar was detained as an imperative security threat to Iraq," the military said Sunday in a statement. (AP)

North Korea Claims to Want Nuke Ban

BEIJING | North Korea said Sunday it is committed to banning nuclear weapons from the Korean Peninsula, a day after the communist nation agreed to return to the disarmament table after a year-long boycott.

The announcement came on the same day U.S. Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice and Chinese leaders met to try to resolve the long-running impasse that has spawned concern over the North's nuclear weapons program.

"The resumption of the talks itself is important but the most essential thing is for ... an in-depth discussion on ways of denuclearizing the Korean Peninsula to make substantial progress in the talks," a North Korean Foreign Ministry spokesman was quoted as saying by the country's official Korean Central News Agency.

The news, however, was met with caution by Rice, who said resuming the six-nation talks was "only a start."

"The issue now for North Korea is to make the strategic choice to give up its nuclear weapons program," she said. (AP)

'Circulator' Buses Start Circulating

New crosstown routes to link downtown, tourist attractions

WASHINGTON | District of Columbia officials launched a new bus service designed to link several of the city's major activity centers together on Sunday.

Twenty-nine Downtown Circulator buses are now running on just two routes but the fleet could eventually include 90 buses serving additional routes.

"A lot of people who come to the National Mall say that they really would like to have some sort of inexpensive, easy to get on and off, mass transit system," said Dan Tangherlini, director of the D.C. Department of Transportation. Privately operated buses and tour mobiles with guides providing interpretive narration costs nearly $20 per passenger compared to the Circulator's $1 fare.

The distance between the Kennedy Center and the U.S. Capitol is nearly three miles. District officials have identified 38 major attractions located between those two points which attract large numbers of the 22 million tourists who visit the city each year.

Tangherlini said discussions with the National Park Service about adding Circulator routes serving major museums and monuments have moved to environmental impact stage.

Metro, several downtown business groups and the D.C. Convention and Tourism Council are also supporting the service.

High Hopes For Panda Cub at Zoo

WASHINGTON | Giant panda Mei Xiang appeared to be nursing her day-old cub on Sunday, a positive sign of survival for a tiny bear susceptible to malnutrition, bacterial infection and even the lumbering of its 250-pound mother.

The National Zoo's first panda cub in 16 years survived its initial 24 hours — a benchmark for pandas born in captivity — and continued to emit such a robust squeal that zoo officials were optimistic about the days ahead.

"Everything seems to be going fine," said Peper Long, a spokeswoman for the zoo. "But we know that we have several more of those critical time periods to go."

Mei Xiang and her cub, which probably weighs somewhere between 3 ounces to 5 ounces, have been under round-the-clock watch at the Panda House since she gave birth early Saturday.

They will remain in a den for the next three months, segregated from her mate, Tian Tian, as well as zoo visitors.

Tian Tian probably is not even aware he is a father, Long said.

Mixing Bowl Construction Delayed

SPRINGFIELD, VA. | The massive Springfield interchange project might not be completed by summer 2007 as scheduled because of delays opening three bridges, Virginia transportation officials said.

Two of the bridges were scheduled to open this month, but that target has been pushed back to November at the earliest.

The Washington Post reported Sunday that officials are requiring the project's primary builder, Archer Western Contractors Ltd., to detail a new plan by Friday for how the company expects to get the construction schedule back on track. (AP)

Bedard to Ready for Return With a Start in the Minors

Erik Bedard will pitch Tuesday for the Single-A Delmarva Shorebirds, and if all goes well, the Baltimore Orioles' left-hander will come off the 15-day disabled list on July 18 for a start against the Minnesota Twins.

Bedard was 5-1 with a 2.08 ERA at the time of the injury. There's no telling whether the layoff will make him stronger for the second half, or cause him to lose the momentum he gathered in April and May. (AP)

Mets avoided a sweep by beating the outmatched Pittsburgh Pirates 6-1 Sunday. Martinez (10-3) was in control in his first start in Pittsburgh since 1997, striking out four in the first two innings and nine overall in seven innings for his eighth win and lowering his ERA to 2.82. (AP)

Nationals Lose Another 1-Run Game

Phillies win series with a 5-4 win in 12 innings

NATIONALS | Ryan Howard hit a tying two-run homer in the eighth inning, and pinch-hitter Ramon Martinez drove in the tie-breaking run in the 12th to lift the Philadelphia Phillies to a 5-4 win over the Washington Nationals on Sunday.

David Bell hit a one-out single to center off Sun-Woo Kim (1-2) in the 12th and went to third on Todd Pratt's single. Jason Michaels flew out and Jimmy Rollins was intentionally walked to load the bases.

Martinez, who had only nine at-bats for the Phillies since he was acquired on June 8 from Detroit, chopped a grounder into left to end the game that lasted 4 hours, 1 minute.

The Nationals had their chances against Philadelphia's bullpen in extra innings, but the Nationals stranded two runners in both the 10th and 12th innings.

The Phillies trailed 4-2 in the eighth when reliever Gary Majewski gave up a one-out walk to Chase Utley. Howard followed with his third homer of the year, clearing the 401-foot sign in center with a shot that landed in the shrubs.

Sunny Kim grimaces after giving up the winning run in the Nats' loss in Philly. GEORGE WIDMANN/AP

Washington's Esteban Loaiza was steady but hardly exceptional in his six innings, striking out six and walking five.

The Nationals led 3-0 following Jose Guillen's 18th homer in the fourth, a two-run shot to left.

Washington lost its second consecutive one-run game — its fifth loss in seven games. But the club still enters the All-Star break 52-36 and in first place in the NL East.

Leading the division at the break is no guarantee of a successful season, of course. Just ask the Phillies who led the NL East at the break last year, then finished 10 games behind Atlanta. DAN GELSTON (AP)

O's Head Into Break on a High Note

Baltimore beats Boston for series win, Palmeiro two hits shy of 3,000

ORIOLES | The only thing missing from a near-perfect weekend for the Baltimore Orioles was having Rafael Palmeiro get his 3,000th hit.

That didn't matter much to Palmeiro, who took great delight in helping the Orioles charge into the All-Star break by taking three of four from the defending World Series champion Boston Red Sox.

Palmeiro and Jay Gibbons hit solo home runs to back a strong pitching performance by Rodrigo Lopez, leading the Orioles to a 4-1 victory Sunday.

Palmeiro's homer off knuckleballer Tim Wakefield (8-7) was his third in three games. Palmeiro also hit a sacrifice fly, but his 1-for-3 afternoon left him two hits short of becoming the fourth player in baseball history to have 3,000 hits and 500 home runs.

"The hits are going to come," he said. "The thing is, we were trying to get three out of four. I was able to contribute to that."

Lopez (8-5) gave up one run and three hits in eight innings. He struck out six, walked none and retired his final 14 batters. DAVID GINSBURG (AP)

Earnhardt Wins His First Race of NASCAR Season

AUTO RACING | A jubilant Dale Earnhardt Jr. broke through for his first NASCAR Nextel Cup victory of the season Sunday, using a two-tire strategy and holding off Matt Kenseth to win at Chicagoland Speedway.

"I was worried I was going to go winless this year," the relieved Earnhardt said after smoking the tires on his No. 8 Chevrolet and celebrating with his crew in the infield grass.

Kenseth led 176 of the 267 laps but wound up second after choosing to change four tires and falling behind on his final pit stop in the USG Sheetrock 400.

Jimmie Johnson, the series points leader, came back from a lap down to finish third, followed by Vickers and Stewart. MIKE HARRIS (AP)

Lance Gives Up the Lead

Rasmussen wins first mountain stage of the Tour

CYCLING | Lance Armstrong is not concerned that someone else is now wearing the bright yellow leader's jersey at the Tour de France.

At least not yet.

Armstrong surrendered the overall lead in the race's ninth stage Sunday, taking the pressure off his team as the race gets ready to enter the Alps — where battles between the American and other Tour hopefuls could begin in earnest.

"We don't need the yellow jersey, we don't need to keep it in the Alps, we need to have it at the end," Armstrong said.

Jens Voigt of Germany — not a contender to win in Paris — took the jersey from Armstrong by finishing three minutes ahead of the six-time champion.

Danishracer Mickael Rasmussen won the stage with a gutsy solo ride. He was first over the six climbs, covering the 106.3-mile route from Gerardmer to Mulhouse in eastern France in 4 hours, 8 minutes, 20 seconds.

Voigt finished 3:04 later, just behind French rider Christophe Moreau. Armstrong, who had worn yellow for five days, finished in 28th place, crossing the line comfortably in a pack with his main rivals.

"I felt like today might be the day when the jersey would be given away," Armstrong said.

The riders rest Monday before the first of three Alpine stages — from Grenoble to the ski station of Courchevel. JOHN LEICESTER (AP)

Lance Armstrong, in yellow, strains through the ninth stage of the Tour de France on Sunday. He lost the yellow jersey, for the time being, in the two-week race.

Sean O'Hair shot a 6-under par on Sunday to win the John Deere Classic.

Rookie O'Hair Gets First PGA Victory

GOLF | Sean O'Hair shot a 6-under-par 65 on Sunday, holding off J.L. Lewis and Hank Kuehne to win the John Deere Classic for his first career U.S. PGA Tour victory.

The rookie, who turns 23 on Monday and was making only his 18th career start on the American tour, finished with a 16-under 268.

O'Hair recovered from trouble on the 18th when he nearly put his ball in the water. With the ball on the hazard line, O'Hair chipped within 10 feet to make par and then watched as his two closest challengers faded.

Kuehne and Lewis were two holes behind him, and both were at 15 under after 17. Lewis put his second shot at 18 in the water and Kuehne left a 24-foot birdie putt about 2 feet short, sealing the win for O'Hair.

The victory also earned O'Hair a spot in next week's British Open at St. Andrews, but he said he wasn't sure yet if he was going to go.

Kuehne (68) and Robert Damron (67) finished one stroke behind O'Hair at 269. NANCY ARMOUR (AP)

Internet users are changing their habits to hide from spyware

MALWARE | Internet users worried about spyware and adware are shunning specific Web sites, avoiding file-sharing networks, even switching browsers.

Many have also stopped opening e-mail attachments without first making sure they are safe, the Pew Internet and American Life Project said in a study issued Wednesday.

"People are scaling back on some Internet activities," said Susannah Fox, the study's main author. "People are feeling less adventurous, less free to do whatever they want to do online."

Like no other Internet threat before it, spyware is getting people's attention, she said. "It maybe will bring more awareness of all kinds of security issues."

According to Pew, 91 percent of Internet users polled have made at least one behavioral change.

Users hit by spyware or adware were more likely than others to change their habits.

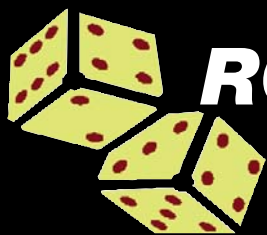

Although many users have changed their online habits, they haven't necessarily fixed their machines, even as infected computers slow, often to a crawl.

Twenty percent of users who had computer problems did not attempt a fix. Among those who did, 29 percent waited a month or longer.

Two in five who tried to fix their machines did so on their own while others needed help from a friend, family member or a professional repair shop. In 20 percent of cases, the problem couldn't be fixed.

The survey also found that 43 percent of Internet users said they've been hit with spyware, adware or both. Those who report spyware were more likely to have previously engaged in "risky" behavior such as playing online games and visiting adult sites. ANICK JESDANUN (AP)

Radio Assistant

DAVID GARCIA, 27

JOB: Programming assistant at Lanham, Md.-based El Zol WLZL-FM, the Spanish-language station that replaced WHFS 99.1 in January.

EDUCATION: Bachelor's degree in radio and television broadcasting from San Jose State University.

WHAT HE DOES: Garcia helps decide what music goes on the radio and works with the stations' promotions staff to coordinate events with community organizations. On the music end, he aids the programming director in setting the play list (or "music log" in radio parlance) by looking at trends in listener requests, suggestions from DJs and the charts. Part of song selection is gambling on music that's not yet popular: "We also play some stuff that people may wonder, 'Is it a hit?' But often it will take time to develop," he said.

On the promotions side, community organizations contact Garcia about their events and he determines the station's involvement. Maybe the group just needs a public service announcement, or maybe the event warrants the full-on DJ-and-freegiveaway treatment.

WOULD YOU WANT HIS JOB? If you like a tame, routine schedule, no. The hours can change wildly on a daily basis. "You could have to get up early in the morning for a car wash or something and stay late for a festival that goes into the night," he said. Plus, because a radio station is active 24-7, employees have to come in at all kinds of late hours to set programming.

HOW YOU CAN GET HIS JOB: First, put together an "air check"—a demo tape on which you intersperse music and monologue. "That's how we all start off," said Garcia. Next, try to get any radio station job you can. A good place to start may be as a board operator, which was Garcia's first job. Board ops answer phones and make sure the music keeps playing, often during the graveyard shift. "You do [small] things like that and it really does pay off," he said. "You have to be willing to put in the time and effort." And at El Zol and its kin, of course, it's strongly suggested that job applicants speak Spanish.

I am an intern and I cannot take the office cattiness one more minute. Everyone is talking behind everyone else's back, and it's becoming nearly impossible not to get involved. What do I do?

Don't get involved. If someone tries to pull you in, pull out the intern card: "Hey, I'm just here for the summer. I don't know what's going on and I don't think I should get involved." You want to be learning about your field and work right now. Focus on that and try to ignore the rest.

THE ISLAND OPENS NATIONWIDE JULY 22

IT PAYS TO BE BAD: No one liked it, but everyone saw it. That's the tale of "Fantastic Four," which opened to scornful reviews and, apparently, long lines of ticket-buyers over the weekend, taking in $56 million. "War of the Worlds" slipped to No. 2.

Hollywood's 'Hustle'

A first-time director can't have it made until he gets it made

INDIES | The great, relatable leveler in drama — stage or screen — is the desire to better oneself. So DJay, the rough customer at the center of Craig Brewer's arrival film, "Hustle & Flow," is hardly without precedent.

A low-level pimp who manages three women out of the backseat of his car, DJay has a sensitive, creative side trying to come out. He's a wannabe rapper harboring hopes of recording his "flow" and becoming a respected member of Memphis' hip-hop community. "Everybody's gotta have a dream," he is told.

"That's the one right we have — to dream — regardless of where we're from," said Brewer, who counts himself in that number and includes "Hustle & Flow" as Exhibit A.

Terrence Howard, after a round of strong supporting roles ("Ray,"

BETTER THINGS: Terrence Howard dreams of hip-hop stardom in "Hustle & Flow."

"Dead Presidents," "The Best Man," "Crash"), takes his first big step above the title. "There are few actors out there who can truly give you the sense that they are complicated human beings and they are struggling with their complications. Terrence can do that," said Brewer.

Comedian Anthony Anderson, who is not known for subtle understatement, gives a startlingly restrained performance of the high-school pal who records church choirs and provides the means for DJay to climb out of his life-groove.

Two scenes in the film particularly signal the fact that a writer is in the director's chair. One is a segment in which DJay cuts his demo. There's a lot of backing up and starting over, but it is one of the few times in a movie that you ever get to see the creative process at work, refining and defining.

The other scene is one in which DJay lays his demo in the hands of a high-school chum (played by rapper/actor Ludacris) who has made it big in the hip-hop world.

"DJay has always been able to connect the dots," said Brewer. "He ultimately realizes he has got to con this guy. He realizes this much the way I realized it in Hollywood. You can't just rely on talent. You gotta talk your way into something. You gotta get people to listen to you." HARRY HAUN (FILM JOURNAL INTERNATIONAL)

Dinosaur Jr.: Not Extinct Yet

The proto-grunge stars put a troubled past behind them

MUSIC | Talk about coming full circle.

The three original members of Dinosaur Jr. return to Northampton, Mass., Tuesday for the first time since acrimony split them in 1989, to play a club that once banned them.

"We got banned from all the clubs in Northampton, and Boston also," said J Mascis, singer and guitarist for the band, which formed in 1983. "We had no fans and we were too loud."

No fans, too loud — sounds like the makings of an influential underground band. That, of course, is just what Dinosaur Jr. became after the band's second album resonated through indie-rock circles like a nuclear aftershock.

"You're Living All Over Me," released in 1987, blended hardcore punk, blasts of guitar noise and dusty melodies in a combustible mix that spilled into the mainstream as '90s alternative rock. Put simply: No Dinosaur, no Nirvana.

"We had some sort of perseverance," Mascis said. "I don't know why we kept going. We started to get some fans, but I don't know how we survived."

COMFORT ZONE: Murph, Mascis and Barlow aren't at each others' throats — yet.

It wasn't through cordial personal relations. Rancor between Mascis and bassist Lou Barlow meant the two often toured for weeks without speaking. For a while, the trio (including drummer Emmitt "Murph" Murphy) seemed to thrive on the tension.

For now, the three are getting along well enough to tour. It helps that Mascis has found an unselfish reason to hit the road: "I guess we influenced a lot of bands."

But it's too early to say what might happen next.

"We're all just trying to think about making it through the summer," he said.

Family Funny Business

Pauly Shore goes from stoner icon to reality-TV's good son

SECOND ACTS | Pauly Shore is sitting in the back of a horse-drawn carriage trotting through Central Park.

Some tourists spot the star of the goofball '90s movies "Encino Man," "Bio-Dome" and "Jury Duty."

"What was your favorite Pauly Shore movie?" Shore asks. There's an awkward pause.

"Uh, I like the one about the farm," replies a male tourist.

"That's always a good one," says Shore. "That's 'Son-In-Law'."

Nowadays, Shore frequently has to remind people who he is. But

FRANK FRANKLIN/11/AP

TOTALLY PAULY'S SHOES: The actor-comedian's next move is a reality show.

he's more focused on the second half of his career. Once the curly-haired wild child of MTV with the show "Totally Pauly," Shore is now fronting the TBS show "Minding the Store," premiering on July 17. "Store" follows Shore as he attempts to rebuild and revitalize The Comedy Store, the Los Angeles stand-up comedy haven owned by his mother, Mitzi Shore.

"It's like where I was born and raised," Shore said. "People that know me associate me with MTV and the movies. They don't know that I grew up in this legendary place."

Comedians such as Richard Pryor, Robin Williams and Jim Carrey once graced its stage. According to Shore, who partially took over the family business three years ago, laughter at the Store is no longer booming.

In the first episode, he books a "Hot Girls of Comedy" event much to his mother's dismay. In the second episode, Shore's over-the-top dad, comedian Sammy Shore, is Pauly's opening act at a gig in Texas.

"At the end of the day, it's about family," Shore said. "Everyone's got a crazy mother or a nut father that they're embarrassed about but they love. I think people will relate to it."

TOMORROW, THE WORLD: It was an angst-ridden spring for "Today": A top executive was fired, host Katie Couric faced a critical press and the show lost ground to "Good Morning America." But Couric & Co. have managed to halt the ratings free-fall.

Dead men tell tawdry tales in a drama full of money and murder

MAD MONEY | Based on the murder of Wall Street gazillionaire Ted Ammon (David Sutcliffe), "Murder in the Hamptons" (9 p.m., Lifetime) stars Poppy Montgomery as Ammon's wife, Generosa.

Ted is at first attracted to Generosa's fiery temper. He takes her to dinner, the altar and an adoption agency in rapid succession. The movie wastes no time getting to Generosa's role as a high-strung housewife in a gilded cage, where she proceeds to go stark raving bonkers.

The high point is an elaborate scene involving a dinner party for Ted's clients. When one of them refers to Generosa's just-planted tulips as a lovely "sea of red," our unstrung heroine goes batty, screaming, "They're burgundy! Burgundy!" before proceeding to dig them up with the ferocity of Martha Stewart being whipped with Joan Crawford's wire hangers.

A tale truly stranger than fiction, filled with madness, jealousy, a thermonuclear divorce, murder, cancerous instant karma and a sensational trial, "Murder in the Hamptons" is a potboiler from beginning to end. And you'll never think of tulips in quite the same way. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Footwear

Ancient shoes were comfy and durable — though kinda ugly

Lined with hay and held together by a net of rough string, the leather shoes look bulky, itchy and down-right uncomfortable.

But if they were good enough for Oetzi, the 5,300-year-old man found in an alpine glacier in 1991, they're good enough for the modern foot, insists Petr Hlavacek, a Czech shoe expert who has created replicas, taken them out for a walk and pronounced them far better than most modern footwear.

"These shoes are very comfortable. They are perfectly able to protect your feet against hard terrain, against hot temperatures, against cold temperatures," he said, showing off the replicas in his office at Tomas Bata University in Zlin, Czech Republic.

Despite their flimsy leather soles, the shoes offer a good grip and superb shock absorption, and are blister-free, Hlavacek said. It's like going barefoot, "only better."

After studying the original shoes at the museum in Mainz,

PETR HLAVACEK
SHOE SCHOLAR

Germany, where they are stored, Hlavacek set out to duplicate them. Vaclav Gresak, a university lecturer and saddler, helped.

First there was the string for the net that kept the hay in place — they had to figure out what it was made of. Ready-made string was out of the question. Eventually, Gresak happened upon an old man who remembered how to make it from thin strips of inner bark.

Once they had the right leather — calf, deer and bear skin — they had to find a tanning method that would have been available to Oetzi. Gresak tested vegetable fats with no success. Fats from marrow also failed. Having read an ancient American Indian recipe for tanning, he boiled chopped pig liver and added raw pig's brain. The fatty goo was smeared onto the skin and left for three days.

"It smelled very bad and there were a lot of flies," Gresak recalled. But it worked.

The next challenge was finding hay suitable for the lining. Eventually the researchers found a grass that was long, soft and resilient. It was perfect for Oetzi's shoes. Hlavacek and his team made three pairs of replicas, and several bigger pairs to fit the researchers. Now it was 2001 and time for a field test — a two-day hike in Alpine terrain near the Italy-Austria border where Oetzi was found.

Vaclav Patek, a Czech mountaineer who took part in the hike, recalled that the shoes "were a pleasant surprise." Patek, who owns a firm that makes mountaineering shoes, has climbed all of Europe's tallest mountains. "I daresay I would manage to climb them all in the Oetzi shoes," he said.

Because Hlavacek takes a scientific approach to shoes, he had the replicas tested for pressure absorption, temperature and other factors. The Oetzi shoes beat modern footwear in most categories aside from being able to withstand moisture.

Despite their charms, Hlavacek doesn't expect Oetzi shoes to catch on with the public. They're difficult to put on, and the hay needs regular replacement. And, "try going with these shoes to the train station," he said. "The main problem is connected with fashion." SUSANNA LOOF (AP)

Medicine

Doctors specializing in teens speak their patients' language

When 16-year-old Marissa Skembo sees her doctor, she jokes that their conversation can go beyond typical ailments to include anything a teen might encounter — “drugs, sex, rock ‘n’ roll.”

For about two years, the Dallas teen has gone to a doctor who specializes in patients ages 11 to 21.

“I think that there’s a special art to caring for a teenager — from earning their trust to being able to understand their behaviors,” said Skembo’s doctor, Laura Scalfano, who’s the director of adolescent medicine at the University of Texas Southwestern.

Some teens go to doctors who specialize in adolescents because of specific health issues. Others use them as their primary care doctors — a bridge between their pediatrician and finding a doctor as an adult.

“I think that people are realizing more and more that teenagers aren’t just big kids,” said Dr. James Fitzgibbon, director of adolescent medicine at Akron Children’s Hospital in Ohio.

Doctors who specialize in teens will often make a point of spending an extended amount of time talking to their patients.

“Sometimes it takes a long time to get the information out of the young adult. Sometimes you have to hear a lot of information before you really get down to the root cause,” said Dr. Deborah Poteet-Johnson, who has a private practice in adolescent medicine in Chattanooga, Tenn.

While some patients are direct about their concerns, some are more evasive. They’ll “come in and say ‘I’ve got this bad cold. Oh, by the way, can we talk about birth control?’” said Poteet-Johnson.

While the specialization began in the 1950s, an actual subspecialty certificate in adolescent medicine has been offered only since 1994 to those who have passed the board in pediatrics and internal medicine and since 2001 to those in family medicine.

It’s something that few officially pursue, however, with only about 550 people currently holding the designation. Others have focused on teens for their entire careers, not bothering with the subcertification.

Basically, doctors say, physicians of adolescents are more focused on issues that might be on the minds of teens. And they are careful to balance their young patient’s need to maintain some autonomy with the parent’s need for information.

Many times the doctor will talk separately to each and then both parent and teen together, said Dr. Bret J. Rudy, associate chief of the adolescent medicine division at the Children’s Hospital of Philadelphia. “It’s a little bit more of a juggling act,” he said.

Of course, finding a teen specialist can be a challenge, especially in rural areas, and many teens are happy with their pediatricians.

But Marissa Skembo’s mother said she really appreciates the time that Scalfano devotes to her daughter.

“We really like her style, she treats the whole person, not just the physical — the emotional and social person, too,” Consie Skembo said. “She talks about anything and everything.” JAMIE STENGLE (AP)

 Noir elegance strolls the Paris runways

FOR GIORGIO ARMANI, BLACK MEANS understated elegance, while John Galliano uses it for drama in this season's collections. Valentino's black is all about movie-star glamor.

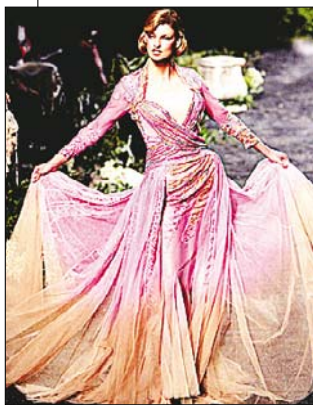

Armani mixed simplicity and sobriety with verve in his second couture show Wednesday. Having sent out glittery dresses fit for Hollywood divas last season, he focused this season on big-city sophistication. The show started with silhouettes combining 1940s sweetheart necklines with 1980s glamour. The whole look was given a dash of old-fashioned style with crystal-beaded gloves, hats and bags, or fur capes in woven mink. In addition to a range of fancy trouser looks, Armani sent out sexy "mermaid" dresses that hugged the body in the front and were cut low in the back.

The scene at Christian Dior was quite the opposite. The collection started with a "nude" corset perfectly matched to the wearer's skin tone, over which Galliano draped wisps of black tulle, embroidery or inlays of lace to create an exaggerated silhouette complete with bustle skirts in black embroidered tulle. The effects allowed for unusual drapery around the shoulders or torso, which were all worked into looks that ranged from early pearl-gray Edwardian dresses to asymmetrical gowns replicating the taste and style of Dior's famous movie star clients of the early 1950s.

The second half of the show went south of the border, combining classic Dior silhouettes with festive Peruvian costumes. "Nude" corsets were replaced by flatter, more colorful ones that pulled in waists of folkloric patterned dance skirts cut from multicolored wool, raffia and tulle.

Between the sobriety of Armani and the grandiosity of Galliano, Valentino found a fabulous middle ground. There were his signature day suits: perfectly tailored black-and-white tweed jackets with little mink-trimmed collars and cuffs, square shoulders and pencil-slim skirts. There were also snow-white brocade dinner suits etched in silver crystal. But the audience had come to see his glamorous evening gowns. Standing out in the collection were a champagne-toned lace suit, discreetly dotted with clear crystals and a matching fox picture collar; a black satin opera gown, with white bands of satin, forming a sumptuous bow at the back; and a blond horizontally pleated chiffon dress, worn with a mink jacket shaped as a bow.

Pick This Knit

A few years ago, crafty haute-flics and crazy grandmas bonded over the big knitting craze, and everybody had a theory: Knitting was the new yoga; knitting was the new therapy; knitting was the new sex. Now knitting is the new It Bag, with this MARGARET NICOLE CLUTCH (at margaretnicole.com, the 11-by-6 inch model is $130; the 14-by-7 inch is $150). Cute enough to match summer's girly-style and cozy enough to keep your valuables safe inside, the bag comes in a slew of color combos and, according to US Weekly, has the full support of Angelina Jolie. And, if your lust isn't yet sated for shameless adorability, Nicole's wee "clutchettes" ($30) are just big enough for a phone and a lipstick. (THE DAILY)

Slowing Market?

Washington Post real estate editor, MARYANN HAGGERTY, was online Friday to discuss the D.C. area housing picture | washingtonpost.com/liveonline

I've seen more homes sit on the market longer than they did a year ago. And I've seen several signs on homes for sale that say "price reduced." Do you think this indicates the market is slowing, perhaps to a more normal level?

There are several questions here [from readers] that report signs of what may be slowing markets. Or may not be. The market around here slows down markedly every summer.

I see more houses are still on the market, at the same time prices on the houses remain unfazed. Is this another conundrum in real estate like the bond market?

Home prices can be a bit "sticky" if demand slows but sellers refuse to budge on their prices. It indeed is not like a stock market, where the sheer buy-sell volume theoretically finds the perfect price.

Do you have any tips for selecting a real estate agent?

Here's how you do it. Ask around. Ask your friends and neighbors — those are the best recommendations you can get. Pick at least three agents who are active in your market. Interview all of them. If you're a seller, make sure you understand precisely their marketing plan and their fees. If you're a buyer, make sure you understand their service.

es. Check references. If a referral promises to save you money, make sure you discuss that up front. Then, armed with all that info — and your own good common sense — pick the agent you want to work with.

We are buying a house and my income can qualify for the loan. Is there any advantage to having my husband as a co-borrower?

I would insist that he be on the loan — not for financial reasons, but for psychological ones. It is the biggest purchase you will make in your life together; you should do it together.

I'm thinking of buying a condo in either D.C. or Arlington (Orange Line). I'm concerned it will be hard to sell in five years if I need to move. Is the Clarendon area being overbuilt? Should I buy in D.C.?

Historically, condo prices have been more volatile than single-family home prices. I can't tell if the market is overbuilt — but it wouldn't shock me, frankly.

METAL DETECTORS IN METRO? Come on! How long of a commute do you want? Some of us commute an hour already. Metal detectors would just slow things down to a crawl. Mass transit by design is to be open, accessible and quick. To start taking measures like placing metal detectors in Metro would be caving in to the terrorists.

Metal Detectors No Panacea

ON FRIDAY, A READER suggested that metal detectors should be in all Metro stations. We need to accept that there will always be a way for people to hurt us. If we continue to look at prevention in terms of stopping attacks, rather than changing the atmosphere that creates the desire to commit terrorist acts, we will always be one step behind the next threat to our way of life.

PEOPLE

Nic Cage films are always in good taste.

FIRSTS

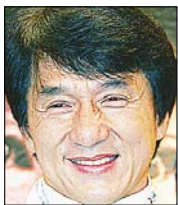

And So It Has Begun

Oliver Stone will direct a film based on the story of two police officers who were trapped in the rubble on Sept. 11, 2001. NICOLAS CAGE will star as Port Authority police Sgt. John McLoughlin. "It's a work of collective passion, a serious meditation on what happened and carries within a compassion that heals," Stone said Friday. "It's an exploration of heroism in our country — but it's international at the same time in its humanity." (AP)

Jackie Throws Down Glove

JACKIE CHAN says the third installment of "Rush Hour" cannot proceed because Chris Tucker is making too many demands. "He wants too much power. The movie company hasn't obliged. He wants final editing rights and the final look at the movie and so on," Chan said. "He's still a new actor. ... How many movies has he made? Two movies have already made him very famous and made him a lot of money." (AP)

POOR TASTE

Pray It Was a Fake

Actor/singer OMARION is being severely criticized for a press release, issued Thursday, asking his fans to pray for him because he was in London, though he was not hurt. By Friday, E! Online reported, Omarion's official Web site, omariononline.com, had disavowed the press release, at one point calling it a hoax. The matter is not yet resolved. (AP) is coming back to Broadway to play Roxie Hart in the long-running revival of "Chicago."

Shields, currently starring in the London production of the Kander and Ebb musical, joins the New York company Sept. 6 at the Ambassador Theatre.

And Tom said Brooke's career was tanking!

The show is in its ninth year on Broadway. The actress scored a critical and popular success in New York last season when she stepped into the role of Ruth Sherwood in the revival of "Wonderful Town." Shields also has appeared on Broadway as Rizzo in the revival of "Grease!" and as Sally Bowles in "Cabaret." (AP)

Nike Knows Americans Have Very Short Memories

Nike is using photos of KOBE BRYANT for the first time since his arrest two years ago for an alleged assault on a female employee at a Colorado resort. "Nike agrees with most NBA observers that Kobe ranks among the very best players in the NBA, and his training and preparation are key elements of his game," said Nike spokesman Rodney Knox. The ads appear in Sports Illustrated, and are the first to use Bryant's image. Prosecutors dismissed a rape charge against Bryant last September after his alleged victim refused to go ahead with the case. (AP)

The brain cells containing Kobe's trial data are now full of Michael Jackson.

AWARDS

France Hearts Patti Smith

Punk rocker PATTI SMITH, 58, received the Commander of the Order of the Arts and Letters award from France on Sunday. The ministry noted her appreciation for French poet Arthur

Rimbaud, and praised her as "one of the most influential artists in women's rock 'n' roll." (AP)
